

Zapf Dingbats as Unicode Symbols

This package utilises the native ZapfDingbat PDF font to get a bunch of typographical symbols. It should be usable on any pdf \TeX -centric installation.

Installation

Unpack `symb-uni-zapf.zip` in your \TeX directory. It includes `.tfm`, `.enc`, and `.map` files. The `symb-uzd.tex` file is placed in the `context/third` directory.

Run `texhash` to let \TeX find the files.

Usage

Call this script with:

```
\usesymbols[uzd]
```

This loads the map file, and creates a font synonym. As pdf \TeX only handles map files before the first page is shipped out, it's best to call the `\usesymbols` command at the beginning of your file. If you have another Zapf Dingbat font, you can over-ride the default (built-in PDF) font with:

```
\definefontsynonym[UnicodeRegular27][myfont]
```

Then invoke the symbols with:

```
Cut here: \symbol[Unicode Scissors][UpperBladeScissors]\crlf
\setupsymbolset[Unicode Hearts]
Have a heart: \symbol[HeavyBlackHeart]
\definesymbol[1][{\symbol[RotatedFloralHeartBullet]}]
\startitemize[packed,joinedup]
  \item Fleurons have a long typographic tradition.
  \item It turns out they've been available for free all along.
\stopitemize
```

Cut here: ✂

Have a heart: ♥

- ✂ Fleurons have a long typographic tradition.
- ✂ It turns out they've been available for free all along.
